SKC Communications Acquires Ahern Communications

Full service communication technology integrator to offer comprehensive Unified Communication solutions to acquired clients

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. — SKC Communication Products, LLC announced today that it has reached an agreement with Ahern Communications of Boston, MA to transition all of Ahern's clients to SKC. Ahern Communications is closing its business operations.

SKC was founded in 1986 as Plantronics, Inc.'s first headset distributor. Today, it is Plantronics' largest dealer and a full-service integrator of Unified Communications solutions incorporating voice, video and audio/visual technologies.

"After twenty five years, I have decided to close my company and look ahead to new endeavors," said Ahern founder Dana Ahern. "I am confident SKC is positioned to take these new clients to the next level."

SKC President and CEO Tray Vedock agreed, stating "As Unified Communications continues to evolve, the voice communications space is rapidly merging with video, presentation and data networks. SKC's extensive experience in this space will allow us to continue to enhance our new clients' communication networks."

SKC's support of its headset accounts includes a team of headset specialists available to assist with product selection, setup and troubleshooting. It hosts regular webinars showcasing the latest headset solutions, alerts clients to important news through its TechnoTalk e-mail series and hosts its annual SKC Technology Summit which brings clients and industry experts together to explore the latest voice, video and AV technology solutions.

"We look forward to offering continued service to our new clients, and looking for ways we can further improve their headset purchase and use experiences," state Todd Vincent, SKC Vice President of Sales.

The transaction was effective January 1, 2012.
